About Karen

Karen is an experienced executive coach and trainer. She’s worked in a variety of leadership, training, and HR roles for over 25 years; helping develop managers and leaders in a variety of organisations including Sainsbury, Lidl and Tesco.

Karen is an experienced conference speaker, and recent projects include research into emotional intelligence, performance management, and personal impact and presence.

Karen loves travelling (when allowed) and is fortunate that her work has taken her all over the world – from coaching small business owners in Syria to developing directors and senior managers in Nigeria. Karen is happiest when relaxing at home or on holiday (usually in France) with family and friends and is a keen theatre and film goer.
